

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

WHILE my Octavo Latin-English Dictionary has met the ordinary wants of Colleges and Schools, there has still been a call for a more copious work of the same kind as a book of reference in libraries, and for the convenience of advanced students who do not shrink from the purchase of a large and costly volume. At the same time, it has appeared desirable to transfer to our language the substance of two critical and elaborate Latin-German Dictionaries by Dr. William Freund, in which Latin Lexicography has been carried to a high degree of perfection. These considerations have led me to undertake the task of publishing the Lexicon which is now presented to the reader.

The Dictionaries of Dr. Freund are: — 1. WÖRTERBUCH der Lateinischen Sprache, nach historisch-genetischen Principien, mit steter Berücksichtigung der Grammatik, Synonymik, und Alterthumskunde, 4 Bände. 8vo.; and 2. GESAMMTWÖRTERBUCH der Lateinischen Sprache; enthaltend sowohl sämtliche Wörter der alt-lateinischen Sprache bis zum Untergange des weströmischen Reiches, mit Einschluss der Eigennamen, als auch die wichtigsten mittel- und neu-lateinischen Wörter, namentlich die in die neueren Europäischen Sprachen übergegangenen, so wie die lateinischen und latinisirten Kunstausdrücke der Medizin, Chirurgie, Anatomie, Chemie, Zoologie, Botanik, u.s.w.; mit durchgängiger Unterscheidung der klassischen von der unklassischen Ausdrucksweise, und mit vorzüglicher Berücksichtigung der Ciceronianischen Phraseologie, 2 Bände. 8vo. I had no difficulty in making choice of the Gesammtwörterbuch (Condensed Dictionary) as the foundation of my labours, in decided preference to the more voluminous Wörterbuch. By an admirable system of compression, without material abridgement, the substance of the larger work is given or represented in the smaller; while the latter not only contains the results of more mature consideration, but is also enriched with additional matter, and recommended by other advantageous features peculiar to itself. In particular, this work has had the benefit of an extensive revision by the author, which has led to the remodeling of many important articles; it also contains a whole class of medical and other scientific terms not to be found in the former, and includes a comparison of the Italian and French languages with the Latin of various ages. The excellence of these Dictionaries, especially of the Gesammtwörterbuch, consists in — careful philological criticism, embracing an accurate discrimination of the age and quality of words and meanings (Classical prose, Poetical, Ante- and Post-Classical, &c.), — an admirable arrangement of phrases, — a very minute and thorough application of a system already adopted by earlier Lexi-cographers for the classification of meanings (which, it may be observed, are here divided and subdivided, not only into Proper and Figurature (metaphorical), but into Proper and Metonymical, or Proper, Metonymical, and Figurative, and also into General and Special), — and the addition of many new words and phrases from the most recent researches of philologists.

In preparing this Volume, I have found occasion for more labour than I at first expected. This labour has consisted partly in the editorial task of supplying manifest omissions, and correcting many thousand misprints which are scattered over the whole surface of the Gesamtwörterbuch, and partly in carrying out the plan and extending the substance of the work itself, sometimes from Freund's larger Dictionary, and sometimes from independent sources. In the department of medical and other scientific terminology I have thought it right to explain the Latin words, rather than to give merely verbal renderings: for which purpose I have availed myself of information contained in several of our standard works; more especially, HOOPER'S Medical Dictionary, and the Pentaglott Dictionary of DR. SHIRLEY PALMER. In Botany, I have derived assistance from LOUDON'S Encyclopædia of Plants.

The Etymological Index has been constructed on the basis of DR. GEORGES' Kleines Lateinisches Wörterbuch, as to the selection and arrangement of words, and SCHWENCK'S Etymologisches Wörterbuch, aided by a comparison with FREUND'S Wörterbuch, as to etymology. With respect to the selection of words, I preferred the work of Georges to that of Schwenck, because the former contains only those words which may be properly termed classical, while the latter includes derivatives from all periods of the language without distinction. It is important to possess this succinct view of the actual state of the language in its best age; while it is easy to observe what are the words which present the same analogies, but have not come down to us amongst the writings of standard authors. In the body of the Lexicon, none but undoubted or satisfactory etymologies are mentioned; but the Index presents a little wider excursion in the field of philological speculation. In cases where no derivation is attempted, it must be understood that nothing has yet been accomplished beyond the most vague and uncertain conjectures.

In some of the earlier stages of the work, I have been assisted by Dr. Werner, of Cheltenham, and W. Frädersdorff, Esq., of the Taylor Institute, Oxford.

A CRITICAL NOTATION OF STYLE,

ACCORDING TO THE FOLLOWING SYSTEM.

LARGE CAPITALS, without an asterisk, at the beginning of an article, denote that the word, in at least some of its meanings, is Classical and fully Ciceronian. — All proper names, and the like, are printed in large capitals. Other exceptions to this rule are self-evident wherever they occur.

*LARGE CAPITALS, with a single asterisk, denote that the word is rare in Cicero. Among this class of words are found those which occur only once or twice in Cicero; in many cases, they are words peculiar to that writer. — (An asterisk elsewhere denotes once or rarely.)

**LARGE CAPITALS, with a double asterisk, denote that the word is Classical but not Ciceronian. (An inspection of the examples under each word will serve to show the precise age and quality of the style. For the most part, the words of this class belong to Post-Augustan prose, or to Post-Augustan prose together with Augustan or Post-Augustan poetry. — Sometimes the proper marks are prefixed only to the several numbers, I. II. etc., the word at the head of the article being left in large capitals without asterisks. This takes place chiefly when one meaning, or set of meanings, is simply poetical, and another belongs entirely to Classical (but not Ciceronian) prose. — N. B. The classical prose writers are Cicero, Caesar, Sallust, Livy, Velleius, Celsus, the two Senecas, Quintilian, Tacitus, Suetonius, Pliny the Elder, Pliny the Younger. If a word does not occur in one or more of these writers, it is not printed in large capitals.)

Observe also that classical prose meanings are printed in open Italics.

[SMALL CAPITALS] in brackets denote, in general, that the word does not belong to classical prose. More particularly, words thus printed are either

Poetical (the best poets in which they occur being cited or quoted),

Ante-Classical (indicated by reference), or

Post-Classical, designated by

LL. (or reference), for Low Latin (including ecclesiastical),

ML. (or reference), for Medieval Latin,

NL. for New or Modern Latin (chiefly technical).

Latin words in Italics are either synonyms or (with c prefixed) contraries of the leading word.

 This system is applied to single meanings, through all the divisions and subdivisions, as well as to whole words. When the word at the beginning of an article is printed in large capitals, this implies only that it is Classical and Ciceronian in some one or more of its significations or uses; while yet other meanings are designated by asterisks or brackets as being rare in Cicero, not Ciceronian, poetical, medieval, &c. E. g. ABSOLVO is, in part, Classical and Ciceronian. But *I. Prop. is not Ciceronian, although belonging to Classical prose. II. Fig. is partly Ciceronian: namely, A) 1) Ciceronian; but, ** with gen., not so, yet classical in prose. 2) Ciceronian; but **a) not so, yet classical in prose, while [b] and c) are only poetical, in the comedians. B) is Ciceronian. — ABSUM is, generally speaking, Classical and Ciceronian. More particularly, I. Prop. (in its proper signification) A) 1) and 2), of general import, are classical, and very common in Cicero. *B) 1 and 2, in more restricted senses, are rare in Cicero. [3 is not found in classical prose; it is only poetical, in Plautus.] II. Fig. (in its figurative, i. e. metaphorical, senses and uses) A) of general import, is Classical, and of frequent occurrence in Cicero. B) in more restricted or limited acceptations. 1) 2) 3) are all Classical and Ciceronian. *4) and *5) are rare in Cicero, although more common in other classical prose writers.

ABBREVIATIONS PECULIAR TO THIS WORK.

In the examples, the word of the article is represented by merely its initial letter, with the note of contraction; except when the inflection is such as to require that the word be printed at length for the sake of perspicuity.

This method of abbreviation, while it presents no practical difficulty, tends very materially to contract the dimensions of the several articles, and thus contributes to the good effect of affording a succinct view of the history and quality of even those words which have the most copious meanings. By this means also the bulk of the whole volume has been very much kept down.

Quotations from Cicero, except when there is a full reference to the passages, are made without any indication of the author's name; but the names of all other writers are distinctly cited at the end of each example. It is therefore to be understood that all phrases or passages which are given without the name of an author, or any other special designation, are from Cicero.

Prop. denotes Properly, in a proper sense.

Met. or Meton. — Metonymically.

Fig. — Figuratively (by way of metaphor).

Gen. — Generally, in some general sense or senses.

Esp. — Especially, in some special sense or senses.

AN. conj. Introduces the second part of a disjunctive or interrogative sentence, or an expression of doubt. I. A)

1) In disjunctive interrogative sentences: utrum superbiprius commemorem a. crudelitatem? Cic. Verr. 2. 1, 47: — numquid duas habebis patrias? a. est una illa patria communis? — ea quæ dixi ad corpusne refers? an est aliquid, quod te sua sponte delectet? — eloquar a. sileam, Virg.: —
repeated several times: utrum . . . abstulit, a. . . dedit? a. . .
ademit? a. . . commutavit? — in indirect questions: multum interest, utrum laus imminuatur, a. salus deseratur? — *qua-situm est, in totone circuitu orationis a. in principis solum,
a. in extremis, a. in utraque parte.* 2) The first part of the interrogation is often not expressed, but is to be supplied from the context; in this case, an begins the interrogative sentence.
or, or rather, or perhaps, even: quod aiunt minima de malis, id est, ut turpiter potius quam calamitose: an est ullum majus malum turpitudine? or, or indeed, Cic. Off.
3, 29: — est igitur aliquid, quod perturbata mens melius possit facere quam constans? a. quisquam potest sine perturbatione mentis irasci? — quasi non necesse sit, quicquid isto modo pronuncies, id aut esse aut non esse. An tu dialecticis ne imbutus quidem es? — Thus, especially, in proving an assertion by rising from a weaker argument to a stronger:
(philosophus) cur pecuniam magnopere desideret vel potius cur curet omnino? An Scythies Anacharsis potuit pro nihilo pecuniam ducere, nostrates philosophi facere non potuerunt?
— vero P. Scipio . . . T. Gracchum privatus interfecit: Catilinam vero non consules perferemus? B) Peculiar connections. 1) an non or annon (mostly used in direct questions, more usual than necne): utrum cetera nomina in codicem accepti et expensii digesta habes a. non? Cic.
Rosc. Com. 3: — in indirect questions: utrum sit a. non voltis?
Plaut. 2) An ne, usually anan, pleonast. for an: quid ego de consulatu loquar? parto vis anne gesto? Cic. Pis. 1, 3: — quærendum, utrum una species sit earum anne plures: — quum interrogetur, tria pauca sint anne multa: — Gabinio dicam anne Pompeio, an utrique? — anne de nobis trahere spolia fœde-ratis licebat, de hostibus non licebit? II. 1) In disjunctive sentences that express doubt, or: honestumne factu sit a. turpe dubitant, Cic. Off. 1, 3, 9: — ut nescias, utrum res oratione a. verba sententis illustrentur: — nescio gratulerne tibi a. timeam: — An sometimes denotes uncertainty by itself without a verb expressive of doubt (dubito, dubium, incertum est): verene hoc memorie proditum est, regem istum Num-mam Pythagoræ ipsius discipulum, a. certe Pythagorem fuisse? — conf. Cn. Octavius est an Cn. Cornelius quidam . . . is me crebro ad cenam invitat. 2) a) *Because in such distributive sentences, expressive of doubt, the opinion of the speaker usually inclines to the assertion of the second clause, the expressions haud scio a., nescio a., dubito a.
assume an affirmative sense expressed cautiously, I almost believe, probably, it may be possible that:* *haud scio
a. ita sit, ut nunc fit*, Cic. Tusc. 2, 17, 41: — tantum non mediocrem sed haud scio a. gravissimum: — con-stantiam dico? nescio a. melius patientiam possim dicere:
— extremum illud est, quod tu nescio a. primum putes:
— ingens res ac nescio a. maxima. Liv.: — with negations:
dubitet a. turpe non sit: — haud scio a. ne opus quidem sit, nihil unquam deesse amicis: — eloquentia nescio a. habuisset parem neminem: — *omnibus est faciendum, haud scio
a. nemini potius quam tibi:* — *mea sententia haud scio a.
nulla beator esse possit:* — non sape atque haud scio a. numquam. **b) Meton. for sive: sive nullam opem providebat, seu tædio ambigus spei, an amore conjugis, Tac. A.
14, 59: — thus, sive fatali vecordia, an imminens pericul-orum remedium ipsa pericula ratus, id.

III. In composition ante mostly has a local meaning (Prop. and Fig.): Before, foremost: anteferre, anteire, antepone, etc. With reference to time it is perhaps used by classic writers only in adjectives and adverbs: antelucanus, antemeridianus, antehac. In verbs of time, the preposition is better written separately: ante actus, ante factus, ante paro, etc. In later Latinity, we find these verbs as compounds. [Hence the Ital. anzi; conf. ABANTE.]

ANTĚĀ, adv. ATQUE, or AC (in classical prose we find the latter chiefly before consonants). conj. (ad-que), connects more closely than et single words or whole sentences. And also, and besides, and even, and. I. Connecting single words. A) Gen.: quæ sit scientia atque ars agricolarum, Cic. Fin. 5, 14, 39: quodam animi ardore a impetu concitati: — quæ (virtus) res sibi contrarias aspernatur a. odit: — aspectum deformem atque turpem habere: — copiam sententiarum a. verborum perspicere: — It serves to connect two substantives so as to form an hendiadys: isto animo atque virtute in summa rep. versari, with this virtuous, noble sentiment: — it subjoins a significant word: rem difficilem (dii immortales) a. omnium difficillimum: — hebeti ingenio atque nullo: — ex plurimis periculis et insidiis a. ex media morte: — thus it is connected with adeo, etiam, is, hic, etc.: ducem hostium intra menia a. adeo in senatu videmus: — insto a. urgeo, insector, posco, a. adeo flagito crimen: — quod asperius antea populo videri solebat, id nunc poscitur, id jam populare a. etiam plausibile factum est: — non petentem a. adeo etiam absentem creatum credere quidam: — negotium magnum est navigare a. id mense Quintili: — angustis portis a. his a. Cæsaris militibus occupatis, Cæs. B) Esp. 1) In comparisons, after par, idem, sequus, similis, talis etc.; alius, contra, contrarius, dissimilis, secus, etc., as, than: neque enim mihi par ratio cum Lucilio est ac tecum fuit, Cic. N. D. 3, 1, 3: — in hanc (causam) argumentationes ex iisdem locis sumendæ sunt a. in causam negotialem: — quum ex provincia populi Romani æquam partem tu tibi sumpseris a. populo Romano miseris: — me colit æque a. illum ipsum patronum suum: — nisi haberes, qui illis æque ac tu ipse gauderet: — aliquid ab isto simile in æstimatione a. a ceteris esse factum: — honos tali populi Romani voluntate paucis est delatus ac mihi: — potest non solum aliud mihi ac tibi, sed mihi ipsi aliud alias videri: — non omnia fere contra ac dicta sunt evenisse: qui versantur retro, contrario motu atque cælum: — quod est non dissimile a. ire in Solonium: — cuius ego salutem non secus ac meam tueri debeo. — Thus we sometimes find ut or si with it: quod iste aliter a. ut edixerat decrevisset: — conf. qui suos casus aliter ferunt a. ut auctores aliis ipsi fuerunt: — Egnatii absentis rem ut tueare, æque a. te peto ac si mea negotia essent: — tu similiter facis ac si me roges: — quod dandum est amicitias, large dabitur a. me, non secus ac si meus esset frater: — **After comparatives, for quam: haud minus ac jussi faciunt, Virg.: — velut gravius a. ipse sensisset exceptum, Suet. 2) In explicative or corrective negations, ac non, sometimes with potius; And not, and not rather: perparvam controversiam dicis, ac non eam, quæ dirimat omnia, Cic. Leg. 1, 20 extr.: — quasi nunc id agatur, quis ex tanta multitudine occiderit, ac non hoc quærat, etc.: — si hoc dissuadere est, ac non disturbare ac pervertere: — si res verba desideraret ac non pro se ipsa loqueretur: — With potius: quis (eum) ita aspexit ut perditum civem, ac non potius ut importunissimum hostem? — quamobrem enim scriba deducat ac non potius mulio qui advexit? II. Connecting whole sentences; And, and thus, and even so. A) Gen.: probatur ab eodem illo (Aristotele) maxime pæon, qui est duplex: nam aut a longa oritur, aut a brevibus deinceps tribus etc. Atque illi philosopho ordiri placet a. superiore pæone, Cic. de Or. 3, 47 extr.: — Africanus indigens mei? Minime hercle! ac ego quidem illius: — ita fit, ut nulla sit omnino justitia, si neque natura est, etc. A. si natura confirmatum jus non erit, etc. — To add something more weighty or emphatic: satisne videtur declarasse Dionysius nihil esse ei beatum, cui semper aliquis terror impendat? A. ei ne integrum quidem erat, ut ad justitiam remigraret: — hoc spectant leges, hoc volunt. A. hoc multo magis efficit naturæ ratio. — In expressing a wish, commonly a. utinam: videmus fuisse quosdam, qui iidem ornate ac graviter dicerent. A. utinam in Latio talis oratoris simulacrum reperire possemus! B)

Esp. *1) In comparisons, a. ut [Poet., a. velut] : a. ut magnas utilitates adipiscimur conspatione hominum a. consensu, sic etc., Cic. Off. 2, 5, 16 : — ac veluti magno in populo quum saepe coorta est seditio, Virg. 2) In adversative sentences; freq. connected with tamen; Nevertheless, and yet: ipsi non dicere pro nobis non spondere, non vocare domum suam possint : a. haec a nobis petunt omnia, Cic. Mur. 34, 71 : — nihil praeterea est magnopere dicendum. Ac tamen, ne cui loco non videatur esse responsum, etc. : — conf. ex eodem quasi ludo exisse discipulos dissimiles inter se ac tamen laudandos. 3) In Logic it indicates the minor proposition : Scaptius quaternas postulabat. Metui, si impetrasset, ne tu ipse me amare desineres... A. hoc tempore ipso impingit mihi epistolam Scaptius Brutus, etc. His de causis credo, etc., Cic. Att. 6, 1, 6. 4) In anticipating an objection : ac ne forte hoc magnum ac mirabile esse videatur, Cic. de Or. 2, 46, 191 : — ac ne sine causa videretur edixisse. 5) In recapitulations, and so, and thus : ac de primo quidem officii fonte diximus, Cic. Off. 1, 6 extr. : — ac de inferenda quidem injuria satis dictum est.

ATQUL conj. (at-qui) An adversative particle, serving to connect an adversative clause very closely with the foregoing: But nevertheless, but yet, notwithstanding, however, but rather, but now, and yet, etc. I. Gen. : tum dixisse (Lyandrum) mirari se non modo diligentiam, sed etiam sollicitiam ejus, a quo essent illa dimensa atque descripta; et ei Cyrum respondisse : a. ego ista sum omnia dimensus, nevertheless, however, and yet, Cic. de Sen. 17 : — quum omnia vi et armis egeris, accuses eum, qui se praesidio munierit, non ut te oppugnaret, sed ut vitam suam posset defendere? A. ne ex eo quidem tempore id egit Sestius ut, nevertheless, and yet : — Dionysius quibus opibus praeditam servitute oppressam tenuit civitatem! a. de hoc homine sic scriptum accepimus, summam fuisse ejus in victu temperantiam, and yet, nevertheless : — a. mihi quoque videor venisse opportune, but yet, but rather : a. id tibi verendum est, truly, indeed (with irony) : — O rem, inquis, difficilem et inexplicabilem! a. explicanda est, nevertheless, yet, but : — vereor, ne subarroganter facias, si dixeris tuam : — a. ita dicas necesse est : — After a negative question : modum statuarum haberi nullum placet? a. habeatur necesse est. — With conditional sentences, a. si, but, now if, well then if : a. si tempus est ullum jure hominis necandi, certe illud est : — a. si ita placet, trademus etiam etc. II. In the minor of a syllogism ; But now, now : qui fortis est, idem est fidens... qui autem est fidens, is profecto non extimescit... a. in quem cadit aegritudo, in eundem timor... ita fit ut fortitudini aegritudo repugnet, Cic. Tusc. 3, 7 : — quum sol igneus sit... necesse est, aut ei similis sit igni, etc. ... a. hic noster ignis confector est omnium... negat ergo esse dubium, horum ignium sol utri similis sit, etc. : — (mors) aut plane negligenda est... aut etiam optanda, si, etc. ... a. tertium certe nihil inveniri potest : quid igitur timeam, etc.

Fam. 16, 22 : — sunt quidam ita lingua hæsitantes . . sunt a. quidam ita in iisdem rebus habiles, etc. : — e principio oriuntur omnia : ipsum a. nulla ex re alia nasci potest : — Cræsus hostium vim sese perversurum putavit, pervertit a. suam : — For subjoining something slightly different : quum Speusippum Plato philosophiæ quasi heredem reliquisset, duos a. præstantissimos studio et doctrina Xenocratem Chalcedonium et Aristotelem Stagiritem, etc. : — huic quasi materia, quam tractet, subjecta est veritas. Reliquis a. tribus virtutum necessitates propositæ sunt, etc. . . Ordo a. et constantia et moderatio versantur in eo genere, quod, etc. : — Thus, in any kind of transitions, by which the discourse is continued : ut igitur et monere et moneri proprium est veræ amicitiae, sic habendum est nullam in amicitia pestem esse majorem quam adulationem, etc. . . quum a. omnium rerum simulatio vitiosa est . . tum, etc. : — quid umquam Avitus in se admisit, ut hoc tantum ab eo facinus non abhorreere videatur? quid a. magnopere Oppianicum metuebat, quum, etc.? — It is also repeated several times: expetuntur a. divitiarum quum ad usus vitae necessarios tum ad perfruendas voluptates. In quibus a. major est animus, in iis pecunie cupiditas spectat ad opes: — With interjections: heia a. inimicus! Plaut. Amph. 3, 2, 20: — ecce a. subitum divortium, Cic. Cluent. 5, 14: — conf. assunt optimates... ecce a. maxima voce clamat populus. — [In poetry we sometimes find sed a. connected, Virg. Æ. 2, 101; and, ast a., Cic. poet. ap. Prisc.] II. Esp. A) For subjoining a word repeated from the foregoing sentence: admoneri me satis est. Admonebit a. nemo alius nisi reipubl. tempus, Cic. Pis. 38, 94: — nunc quod agitur, agamus. Agitur a., liberine vivamus an mortem obeamus. B) For resuming a sentence (interrupted by a parenthesis): princeps omnium virtutum illa sapientia, quam σοφία Græci vocant — prudentiam enim, quam Græci φρόνησις, aliam quandam intelligentiam, quæ est rerum expetendarum fugiendarumque scientia — illa a. sapientia, quam principem dixi, etc., Cic. Off. 1, 43, 153. C) For annexing a parenthesis: jam confirmata causa te, hominem amicissimum (me a. appellabat), non dubitabo monere etc., Cic. Ac. 2, 19: — quæ a. nos aut recta aut recte facta dicamus, si placet (illi a. appellat καρποδμήματα), omnes numeros virtutis continent. D) In enumerations, for annexing something more weighty: magnus dicendi labor, magna res, magna dignitas, summa a. gratia, Cic. Mur. 13, 29: — animis omnes tenduntur insidiæ... vel ab ea, quæ penitus in omni sensu implicata insidet, imitatrix boni, voluptas, malorum a. mater omnium: — docet ratio mathematicorum, luna quantum absit a proxima Mercurii stella, multo a. longius a Veneris. E) To annex an impassioned question; But (the Gr. δὲ): quomodo a. moveri animus ad appetendum potest, si id, quod videtur, non percipitur? Cic. Ac. 2, 8, 25: — thus, quomodo a. tibi placuit, Jovem lapidem jurare, quum scias, etc.? — Thus especially in corrective questions: num quis testis Postumum appellavit? Testis a.? num accusator? — quid tandem isti mali in tam tenera insula non fecissent? Non fecissent a.? imo quid ante adventum meum non fecerunt? — ut illi hoc liceret, adjuvi, rogatus ab ipso Ravenne de Cælio tribuno plebis. Ab ipso a.? etiam a Gnæo nostro, etc. F) In syllogisms, to subjoin the minor, like atque and atqui: aut hoc, aut illud: hoc a. non: igitur illud. Itemque: aut hoc, aut illud: non a. hoc: illud igitur. Cic. Top. 14, 56: — si lucet, lucet: lucet a.: lucet igitur: — si dicis te mentiri verumque dicis, mentiris: dicis a. te mentiri verumque dicis: mentiris igitur: — it is repeated several times: qualis cujusque animi affectus esset, talem esse hominem: qualis a. ipse homo esset, talem ejus esse orationem: orationi a. facta similia, factis vitam. Affectus a. animi in bono viro laudabilis, etc. ex quibus bonorum beatam vitam esse concluditur.
